THEY CAME TO THE FAIR

NE of the outstanding features of Hongkong's participation in the Seattle Trude Fair was the decision of the Chicago Trade Fair authorities to buy the Colony's stand completely. This means that our most decorative and highly complimented stall moves into the second biggest industrial district in the ·United States for no extra charge. All our exhibitssamples of a wide range of goods—go with it; in short, for the cost of participating at one fair we are able to take part in two. It is to be hoped that the stand is not left unattended and that the Colony will be represented. The benefits to be gained from this stroke of good fortune should be apparent to everyone. We are planning to take part at the Stockholm trade fair later this year but we should still make every effort to make use of this free trip to Chicago. We believe Hongkong's trade and industrial boom has been very considerably assisted both by indirect publicity and by taken part in about 10 trade besides having organised a number of delegations to various parts of the world and staged our own industrial fairs for the last 17 years. The Department of Commerce and Inlocal businessmen and firms have in this way introduced Hongkong's ever-expanding industrial output to a large number of buyers the world over. With the growth of local trade. Hongkong has to make sure that' momentum in our markets is maintained that special attention given to areas where have been slow to gain foothold or lost ground.

The American market today ly is Hongkong's best. But a trade fair in Chicago attracts not only national but international interest And that is why we urge Government to send an experienced businessman and Colony at our own stand. Road. Meanwhile the leader and members of the Colony's delegation to Seattle should be congratulated for the quality and tastefulness of the display as a whole and the interest it attracted.

TYONGKONG took a wide range of products to suit the market which the Seat-Hongkong people fair heard no harsh words about our textile exports. In fact an official welcoming speech made clear America's preference for reciprocal trade with rather than extension of aid to countries on the Pacific rim. Hongkong shares this sentiment as its own trade figures This year's first statistics put imports from U.S. at $185 million as against our exports of $202 million.

Inquiries received at the Fair were not quite as numerous as expected but the bigger and better patronised New York Fair which opened during its term possibly drew away some interest. for Hongkong the surest proof of continued American interest in our products was the purchase of our exhibit by the Fair. We therefore have reason to feel very satisfied with the re-

Youth and religion are handicaps for would be president

By RICHARD BERRY

Senator John Fitzgerald Kennedy of Massachusetts, current favourite for the American Democratic Party's presidential nomination, is a candidate with very mixed political blessings.

On the one hand, he is a war hero and a millionaire. He has a charming and attractive wife, an engaging personality, a sound knowledge of international affairs and a knack of selecting able advisers.

He is the first serious Roman Catholic contender for the presidency since Al Smith made his disastrous bid in 1928. There is no evidence that Smith's religious beliefs greatly affected the campaign. But certainly it is a handicap, however slight, to be a Roman Catholic candidate in the United States.

If he were elected, Kennedy would be the youngest President since Theodore Roosevelt inherited the presidency at the age of 42 on the assassination of President McKinley in 1001, TTOW sophisticated we are becoming in Hongkong! A few years ago if two artists like Ruggiero Ricci and Annarosa Taddei had appeared on the same Hongkong platform, we would have been talking about it for weeks before and after the event, and we would have felt grateful to them for playing here at all.

I hope I am not overstressing the point, but Annarosa Taddei gave me the impression throughout the Cesar Franck Sonata that she was very much the dominant personality. Tense and enthralled with the music, she was in marked contrast to the relaxed, even casual appearance of the violinist.

Apart from that one point it was quite delightful to listen to Ricci and Annarosa. They achieved a remarkable measureof true understanding and partnership in the very short time they had to "get together."

Rollason was being taken to Bovingdon, Hertfordshire, to receive his discharge and was later travelling to Birmingham where his wife will be waiting with his parents.

Rollason arrived in Cyprus from the Lebanon last month and gave himself up. A court martial on April 29 sentenced him to a year's detention for descrition, but the sentence was later remitted and the trooper released.

YPRES

Brussels, May 22. Sixty-five British ex-Tommies yesterday made a pilgrimage to the Ypres battlefield where they fought in one of World War I's bloodiest encounters.

The group, all from Kent, were led by crippled 68-yearold former Lance Corporal Bill Dawkings,

None of them had left England since the day they landed back in Blighty in 1918. Tonight they were having a "shell-hole dinner" in a Ypres hetel, instead of bully beef and plum jam in a muddy trench as they had first planned.

As the group's average age is 74, and some are over 80, it was thought they might not survive in Britain and abroad, is this second trench experience.

By MAX TRELL

ELLO, Joe, what do you II know!" Knarf, the Shadow the Turned-About Knarf's sister, Hanid with the same kind

Settled himself

"Hello, Joe, where did you

Meanwhile Joe settled himself down comfortably between Knarf and Hanid, and put his arms around their shoulders. "I feel fine being here with the two best friends I've got in the world," he said. Joe was a strange kind person, that is, if you could call him a person at all. He was made of smoke. He had just come out of Father's pipe, looking more like a puff than a Man. He had sailed around the ceiling of the room once or twice, then he had floated out through the open door, floated up the stairs, and drifted into the room where Knarf and Hanid were sitting.

Looked like a man

By the time he reached Knarf and Hanid he really looked like 8 Man. He had arms and legs and a head. Except that he kept getting bigger or smaller or thinner or fatter from one minute to the next.

And every now and then, as he sat between Knarf and Hanid, he would begin to float off again. That's the reason

"It was the middle of the winter when you were here last," said Knarf to Joe, "and now it's the beginning of spring. Where were you

Then Joe smiled smokily and was silent for a little while. At last he began speaking. "I went around the world," he said. "Now, Joe," said Hanid "is that really true?"

As true as blue," said Joe. "And I did it all-went around the world, I mean-in a pipe. Let me tell you about it." Joe started floating off again but Knarf and Hanid held him down. Then he began: "Now the Man with the first pipe went on a steamship and I stayed in his pipe until we crossed the Atlantic Ocean.

"Didn't you go across any oceans?" asked Knarf. "No," replied Joe, "but went across a big sea. caffed the Mediterranean.

"And then I got into a third pipe. And that Man got into railroad train and we rode all across India; and got into another steamship and sailed to Japan. And I stayed with him the whole time."

"But how did you get back to America, Joe, dear?" Hanid asked.

"Why, I just got into a fourth pipe. And that Man took another aeroplane and we flew all the way across the Pacific Ocean to the state of Hawsii and then to the state of California, and then I got into fifth pipe, and that Man got into an automobile and drove all the way across the country ... right to the corner of this street!"

"And how did you get here?" up with lots of lovely facts, and asked Knart. New motor-racing star Innes Ireland, who shot to fame when he beat Stirling Moss twice at Easter, did it again recently at Silve retone-but this time even more impressively. For behind him not only finished Moss, but eight of the top ten drivers in last year's world championship, including champion Jack Brabham, who was 2.6 seconds behind in second place.

Adding to Ireland's triumph was also the fact that his new Lotus averaged 198.82mph over the 150-mile race, a speed faster than the old lap record. He also set a new lap record of 111.86mph and it looks as though Ireland is consolidating his position as a dangerous threat to the world crown in only his second full season at the wheel.

OF all the charming swim V kids I've met over the Olympic years none has been more natural, happy-go-lucky and full of sport as 17-year-old Natalie Steward.

If her physique—5ft 8in, 12st — suggests a tower of Amazonian toughness forret it. Natalie has good looks and curvacity plus. Moreover, if self-assurance counts for anything she is well on the way to being on the gold standard at Rome.

A short time are I did a spot of after-dinner speaking at a Southern Counties ASA function at which the Rhodeslan-born youngster, then only 16, was as composed as any of the many VIP's sitting at the top table. When a Scottish speaker suggested that with a name like Stewart she should be a Scot, Natalle promptly but quietly corrected him.

I hereby confer on her the title of "Raw Carrol Swim Champ." Raw carrots are her favourite conditioning snacks.

Despite her free-style record - breaking I regard Natalie as the natural successor to backstroke gold medalist Judy Grinham provided her daily swims are confined to that siyle of swimming and nobody tries to interfere with the training schedule which has been drawn up by the boss . . . her mother.

far we have not had a chronic or crippling shortage of hotel space. Beldom, if ever, has it been really necessary to turn visitors away owing to lack of hotel rooms, unless they positively refused to secept other than first grade accommodation. But where in the world has the same situation not arisen from time to time? From personal experience I can recall worse situations by far in as widely spread cities as Bombay, Mexico and Rio de Janeiro. Again, is it for one moment imagined that all visitors to Britain, France, Germany and Switzerland (home of hoteliers) can always be given rooms with private balli, or for that matter, rooms without private bath in the hotel of their choice? Not on your life, but here in equipped Hongkong, visitors can get just that facility at all hotels approved as usable for overseas visitors. This modern type of accommodation, let us not overlook, is basic and standard in such hotels.

In the meantime I am inclined to the opinion that vague reports, to which I have called attention, not only reduce the efficacy of the Colony's overseas publicity, but also adversely affect the normal development of tourism to this area.
